Poetry Month 2012

Activity Kit
Dear Reader,

April is National Poetry Month, and what better way to Shelebrate than with Shel Silverstein?

Every Thing On It, Shel Silverstein’s first posthumous poetry collection in the style of A Light in the Attic, Where the Sidewalk Ends, and Falling Up, was published last year. Critics and readers alike have raved about these touching and delightful new poems and drawings. Now we’ve created a host of activities that draw upon both Every Thing On It and Shel’s past classics. Perfect for use in a classroom, library, or bookstore, or at home, this kit will bring children and adults together in a shared love for the works of the brilliant Shel Silverstein.

SO COME ON IN AND

EXPLORE THE FUN OF POETRY!

HAPPY READING!

It's easy to write your name in a book so other people know it's yours, but sometimes it's fun to add a personal touch. Ask an adult to help you cut out these bookplates. Write your name on the line and tape the bookplate inside the front cover of a book that you own. Now everyone knows the book belongs to you!

Using only the letters S, H, E, and L, can you figure out which letter should go where so that each letter appears only once in every row, column, and box of four squares?

NASTY SCHOOL

Oh have you heard of nasty school?
They teach nasty things and they have nasty rules.
They only take nasties and rowdies and fools,
So come, let's take a walk through nasty school.
You get to nasty school through a secret gate.
The first rule is you must be late.
Your hands and face must be all caked with dirt.
There must be lots of grease and gravy spots upon your shirt.
In class, instead of listening, you just talk,
And make those awful squeaks upon the blackboard with your chalk.
You must make sure your shoes are wet and muddy,
And as for homework, you must guarantee you haven't studied.
You must put gum on everybody's seat,
And when there is a test you have to promise that you'll cheat.
Instead of teachers teaching you to make things,
The bad schoolteachers teach you how to break things:
They teach you how to smash a windowpane
And how to let a brand-new bike get rusty in the rain,
How to smash a vase to smithereens,
How to tear the pages out of someone's magazine,
How to hold your breath and spit and scream,
How to put mustard into someone's chocolate-chip ice cream,
How to bang a fender full of dents,
How to leave your footprint in a square of wet cement,
How to pinch and punch and slam a door,
How to splash water till you flood the bathroom floor,
How to do some muddy belly flops,
How to ruin your teeth with sugar pops,

How to turn a dress into a rag,
How to tear the bottom of a soggy garbage bag,
How to bend your father's fishing hook,
How to drip hot meatloaf gravy on your science book,
How to fill a bathtub up with glue,
How to bounce upon a bed until the springs pop through,
How to fall out of an apple tree,
How to scratch your toe and miss the toilet when you pee,
How to spread a coat of honey on a volleyball,
How to write your name in toothpaste on the bathroom wall,
How to snap a shoelace when you tie it—
These are all the things you'll learn
In nasty school—wanna try it?

For some schools you can't just be good—
You have to be the best.
Here you can't be rotten—
You must be the rottenest.

In “Cinderella,” the prince isn’t quite sure he’ll go after the girl once he finds what she has left behind. Connect the dots to see why!
1. Pamela Purse yelled, “Ladies first,”
Pushing in front of the ice cream line.
Pamela Purse yelled, “Ladies first,”
Grabbing the ketchup at dinnertime.

2. The spoiled brat broke a bike with her bat,
The spoiled brat told the policeman to scat,
The spoiled brat said her sister was fat,
And sat on her birthday cake 'til it was flat.

3. And if I die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my toys to break.
So none of the other kids can use 'em....
Amen.

4. Complain, complain is all he did—
I finally had to close the lid.
In “Writesingtelldraw,” the narrator asks you to writesingtelldraw something for him . . . so now it’s your turn to be an artist like Shel! Come up with an illustration for this Shel Silverstein poem. Think about what baby monster Fred might look like.

FRIGHTENED

“There are kids underneath my bed,”

Cried little baby monster Fred.

Momma monster smiled. “Oh, Fred,

There’s no such thing as kids,” she said.
Shel Silverstein’s black-and-white drawings are simple but so much fun! They jump off the page and come to life without any fancy colors... but sometimes it’s fun to imagine what crazy colors might be used!
So go on—color in the Giraffe and a Half with all the colors you can think of!
Trace a path through the list of five poems from Every Thing On It without ever picking up your pen. You can move up, down, left, or right, but you’ll never use a letter again once you’ve already traced through it. The first one has been done for you!
